Retirement planning course to be offered through FSU

Special to the Democrat

First Franklin Financial will offer its Retirement Planning Today™ course through Florida State University. The two-day program, offered nationally through the Financial Educators Network, will be taught Feb. 3 and 10 by First Franklin's branch manager, Brett F. Ewing.

The course blends financial education with life planning to help participants build wealth, align their money with their values, and achieve retirement lifestyle goals. The two sessions are held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The course material includes five strategies to manage investment risks, plus ways to save money on this year's taxes, important questions to ask before buying insurance coverage, how to invest in and take money out of your company's retirement plan, as well as determine the savings needed to retire today or in the future.

Florida State University will be offering alumni continuing education credits for this course.

Registration is limited and available through the university's Web site, www.learningforlife.fsu.edu. Those planning to attend can also contact FSU-Academic & Professional Program Services at 644-3806 for more information.
